TO ASK WHEN CHOOSING CBD OILS FOR YOUR PET

Liz Hughston is a credentialed Veterinary Technician, VTS in Small Animal Internal Medicine and Emergency and Critical Care, and a Certified Veterinary Cannabis Counselor. Here's what she tells people to look for when selecting a CBD product for pets:

Choose products specific to pets

Hughston recommends veterinary-specific CBD oils. Those made for humans may have higher levels of THC that can be toxic to pets. Choose products derived from hemp, not marijuana. And look out for toxic ingredients like xylitol!

Ask for the Certificate of Analysis

This is a third-party, independent analysis of the product. Some of the information it includes is:

- CBD:THC ratio
- Breakdown of all cannabinoids in product
- Herbicide, Microbial and Heavy Metal testing
- Amount of CBD per tsp
- Complete ingredient list

Look for a quality seal

Supplements are not FDA regulated. Look for products that adhere to voluntary manufacturing standards such as:

National Animal Supplement Council's Quality Seal Good Manufacturing Practice
